SUMMARY

4. 8.5"x11". This is one of those sketches that came together effortlessly. I like it almost as much as the final. 5. 18"x24". One of the rare times I've been entirely pleased with the end result. 6. 18"x24". Whatever you do don't look at her face. It's terrible. 7. 18"x24". He grooms his chest hair. 8. 18"x24". This was a fun one to do. I like his shirt highlights. 9. 18"x24". I did this one with the idea that women often times attract men by showing skin. Even though she may not be very pretty, guys will still fall for it. 10. 18"x24". My favorite part is the folds in her armpit skin. It makes it much more realistic to me. 11. 18"x24". When you love someone you want to protect him or her from harm. 12. 18"x24". Her hair should be falling down over the helmet but that's not what people notice in this piece. 13. 18"x24". Sex isn't always an expression of love. 14. 11"x14". I like that the curve of the 7 matches the curve of her armo. 15. 11"x14". I like how the front tire bleeds into the shadow of the body. If I don't mention that nobody will ever notice. 16. 11"x14". I like the lighting on his head. 17. 15"x20". This was a magazine ad for Converse Shoes. They told me to illustrate the word "Limitless". I remember playing in my back yard as a kid with a wooden sword and feeling like I could do anything my imagination allowed. 18. 10"x15". I like that piece in the upper left with the spikes. Another part people would have never looked at. 19. 18"x24". Women don't like this one. 20. 18"x24". Why did I make the teeth so white? 21. 16"x21". This was a magazine ad and poster for Copper Mountain Ski Resort. Also included are the sketches that led up to it. It was a fun freelance piece. I had a lot of freedom.
